Summary: Since more than 60.000 years ago, Planet Earth was populated by a group consisting of 10.000 people located in what we now know as Africa.
A series of genetic tests, carried out in 2001, have shown that all the human beings that live in our planet, descend directly from these first settlers, forming a huge family. „The journey of mankind“ tells us about that amazing voyage with full details, thanks to the scientist who has made possible this discovery, the expert on genetics Spencer Wells.
The program follows Wells in his journey around the world, coming after the traces of our ancestors. Being young, charismatic and passionately fond of his work, Wells has investigated the male chromosome and the human DNA , that contain the data that prove how the first humans abandoned Africa and spread around the world.
